The Antional Banks. od and stable banking system—on to yield a fair return to capital and to pro vide the people with security as nearly absolute as any human institution can provide-is a matter of co great moment that it ought not to be regarded as opening an arena for partisan jouets. But it is plain that history is to repeat itself in the present Congress. From the time of Alexan der Hamilton, the father of the first National bank, the banking question, as often as it has been opened, has brought on a partisen controversy fitly character ized as a "fight."

Jefferson threw against Hamilton's measure the weight of his great influence and he and his friends made their opposi tion on partisan grounds. But Gallatin one of the ablest of the men who have held the Treasury porifolio, who had been Sec retary of the Treasury under Jefferson favored the rechartering of the National bank, but had to yield to his party. The charter having expired, Dallas, third of favored a National bank. Congress presed a bill to that effect, and Madigon vetoed it; States was chartered. This bank was a questionable service to the country.

Gallatin brought forward a plan for a the monopoly on the one hand and to guard against the dangers of the crazy State banking methods. His party would not listen to him, and the country paid for its obstinacy. But thirty years after the Republicans took up the idea and based upon it the present national banking system. At every step of the way parties they are not willing to bny bonds at a high premium and deposit one hundred cents in face value for every sam of ninety cents allowed them for circulation. The Govern ment knows that its bonds are good security at one hundred cents on the dollar. Bankers make advances on them at 95 per cent of their market value. This is not a time of fluctuation in Government bonds. The Government might, with absolute safety to the bill-holder, allow a dollar of circula tion for a dollar in bonds, and there are many, and among them the Secretary of the Treasury, who think the bonds might be accepted at very nearly their market value and circulation issued on that besis There are other considerations growing out of the National bank question, but this is one of sufficient importance to stand by

THE BARBOUR VELL.

At Philippi everything was excitement and bustle. A large number of visitors from a distance arrived the day before and by eight o'clock in the morning the people tem. At every step of the way parties began pouring in from all parts of the have locked horns, and that seems to be county. They came on foot, on horseback, their present stringle. Taking it for crant. have locked horns, and that seems to be their present attitude. Taking it for grant of their present attitude is a mine of sportaneous wealth to its shareholders, and remembering that the existing system is of Republican creation, Democratic politicians of the dominant school feel it to be a patriotic duty to ride a tiltagainst it.

The question which presents itself to Congress is, Is the National banking system worth continuing? The answer involves what it has done for the country, what it is to the country, and what it is likely to be to the country, and what it is likely to be to the country, and what it is a free banking system, because anybody who has mover been a monopoly. It is a free banking system, because anybody who has mover been a monopoly. It is a free banking system, because anybody who has mover only for the sake of security, not to put a limit on the number of persons engaged in it. This freedom grew out of the necessities of the case at the time the eystem was established, for the government desired to market its bonds and increase its ordinary revenues.

A PLEASING EPISODE. Among the many persons who had come up on the train were Gen. B. F. Kelley and wife, of whose presence the and "red-dog" can never have a day. A national bank note issued in Illinois will never be at ten percent discount in New York. The bill of a Wheeling national bank is as good in California as at home. No man pays any attention to the place of issue. If the nete be genuine he knows that the national Treasury holds more than enough to pay it—a dollar for every sum of ninety cents, and now on top of that the enhanced market value of the bonds deposited to secure circulation. The banks are complaining that they are required to lock up in bonds for deposit too much of their capital. Since the bend requirement is for security and not for punishment; and since there is no longer occasion to force a market for the bonds, if the system is to continue at all, some change will have to be made and cught to be made in this regard.

Old banks are surrendering circulation and new ones not applying for it, because they are not willing to buy bonds at a high promium and deposit one hundred cents.

A FREE-FOR-ALL.

Just after the speaking the free dinner was distributed. This consisted of an ample amount of bread and butter, beed and cake, and was handed out to each individual upon wooden plates ordered especially for the purpose. In addition to this great boilers of coftee was prepared, and several hundred this cups were thrown into the crowd, and they were permitted to help themselves and each other from it. The provision, apparently, was ample and was distributed in a very short time and every one seemed satisfied. In fact, the forowd, although a large one, was very good-humored; there was no drinking, no lighting, not even a quarrel, and everything moved along in the completest harmony. The crowd took possession of the town, and were everywhere treated with the ulmost kindness and courtesy.

the utmost kindness and courtesy.

THE RETURN TRIP,

At 4 o'clock the return train left Phillippi for this place, and the trip was a very ovential one. The crowd seemed to have increased instead of diminished, and every available piece of standing room was taken possession of. The warmth of the san had thawed out the ground, and the read like all new roads, was in a bad condition in consequence. The result was that inside of two miles the track on a fill sunk under the load of the train and a bex car ran off the track. This was soon fixed, however, and the train was again on the way. After running about three and a half miles further a car again left the track under circumstances of a much more serious character than the first. The accident occurred upon a curve and high embankmont, and had the train not been stopped just when it was this car and perhaps others might have been thrown over the bank into the river. As it was, no damage was done save a considerably damaged track and a delay of nearly three hours.

Why Conking is Mileut.

To Mr. James M. Scovel, of New Jersey, who undertook to draw out Citizen Roscoe Conking, of New York, on the subject of the Republican nomination for President, the concluding portion of Mr. Conkling's response was as follows:

"When the Persian Embassy was about to take leave of the Grecian Court, once in olden time, they asked and received some message from each of the personages present. When the turn of Zeno came he sa'd: "Ill your mester that you saw a gray-haired old man in Athens who knew ennuch to hold his tongue."

"Please ascribe to my admiration for Zeno and his teaching any sileme touching your forecast of my action in the politics of the future. Cordially yours, "Roscoe Conkling."
